Both passenger and Mr. Chandler might attack his Repub- frieght business will be carried. licanism, but he could not reply to such attacks. They might be just from the senator's point of view as to what constituted loyalty to the Republican party. Mr. Gage had never claimed to be a party man. He had held to the principles of the Republican party and believed he was, in this effort to secure currency legislation, holding fast to one of the cardinal principles of the Republican party as expressed in its platform of 1896. But above and beyond that he believed he had a duty to perform as secretary of the treasury which should not be partisan. He was called to that place to study the financial needs of the country and not party expediencies. He was to serve the whole people as he was supposed to represent the whole people and drew his salary from the revenues of all people. He had given his best thought to this question in an earnest effort to present the needs of the whole country and all the branches of business. With him it was not for party but for country. He did not believe that any party had a mortgage on the truth and he was seeking the truth in regard to currency reform. He believed that Republicans and Democrats must so look at the ques-vantage. Mr. Gage hoped that whoever sought to draw him into debate on this questhan the plane of party expediency. He could not consent to discuss it in any other way, and if Senator Chandler would go before the committee and take up his bill, exposing its weakness and errors, he would thank him for it, because he sought to escape present errors, and had no desire to fall into greater errors.

MINERS MAY STRIKE AGAIN.

More Trouble Seems Probable in the

Pittsburg District. Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 21.-The coal miners and operators held separate conventions Monday, preliminary to the joint convention for the purpose of fixing the mining rate for 1898. Pudging from the results of the day's work it would appear that the convention will not fix the rate and another ties. The miners' convention was asked by the uniformity committee to allow a differential of 10 cents in favor of the operators who sign uniformity agreements. The miners, by a meager majority, decided to allow the differential, but when the matter was brought before the operators' convention it was ignored. Thus it looks as though uniformity in the Pittsburg district is remote. On the rate question the miners passed a resolution which means a complicated fight. In spite of the fact that the courts have ruled that the new mining law is unconstitutional, the resolution demands a rate of 49 cents a ton for coal as it comes from the mine, without being screened. The operators decided to ignore the new mining law entirely. Both conventions favored an attempt to bring about an interstate convention of operators and miners, to be held at Columbus, Ohio, some time next month for the purpose of fixing the mining rates for the several states.

BERING SEA ARBITRATION.

Canada Likely to Receive an Award Amounting to $1,000,000.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 21.-After a week of conferences in this city Justices Putnam and King, the commissioners for the United States and Canada respectively, in the arbitration of the Bering sea claims, have completed their work and will soon begin the preparation of their reports to their governments. The Bering sea claims, which it was proposed to settle for $425,000 by President Cleveland, have now aggregated more than $800,000 with interest for ten years. The total is likely to be about $1,000,000.

In a general way the conferences of the two commissioners have been of the most satisfactory character, and are likely to result in another victory for international arbitration. This is the first international arbitration where the proofs have been taken orally, as in a court of justice.

Auditorium Bullding at Kansas City Burns Early This Morning.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 21.-Fire broke out at 1:15 o'clock this morning in the big Auditorium Building, Ninth and Holmes streets, which contains the biggest theater in Kansas City and one of the big hotels.

Though the greatest excitement prevailed among the guests of the hotel, no one was hurt in the panic which followed the alarm of fire, and all escaped to the street.

The guests on the lower floors of the hotel succeeded in saving most of their personal effects. The Auditorium Building cost about $225,000, and is owned by Alexander Fraser, who also owns the hotel and theater furnishings.

PAY OUT OF RELIEF FUNDS

County Treasurer Thorpe Disbursed Seven Hundred Dollars Yesterday.

County Treasurer Thorpe paid out yesterday $736 from the Soldiers relief fund. This money is paid out to dependent soldiers and their widows every two months. During the winter months the amount called for is much greater than in the summer and those having the work in hand find it relieves much suffering.

Now Considering Two Calls, and Will

Doubtless Accept One of Them. Rev. W. H. Wotton has now under consideration two calls. The one that he is most urged to accept, comes from a town in Georgia near the city of Atlanta, while the other comes from California. Rev. Mr. Wotton, for some time past, has contemplated moving to a warmer climate for the benefit of his health and there is little doubt now but what he will accept one or the other of these calls.

Indianapolis Har a Curfew Law. Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 21.—The city council by a vote of 12 to 7, two members being absent, passed a curfew ordinance prohibiting children under 15 from using the streets after 9 p. m. in the summer and 8 p. m. in the winter. An effort will be made to defeat it on a reconsideration.

UNCLE JIM'S DANCING.

Uncle Jim, he'd never been To any city ball Until he come a-visitin The folks in town last fall: could dance until you couldn't rest, Knowed how to fling his heel, But all the dance he knowed wuz jest The old Virginny reel.

So when they took him to the ball The gals had lots of fun. He went a-slippin crost the hall An bumpin every one. Of course he couldn't waltz, but they Jest made believe he could. They kept on whirlin him away. 'Twuz worse than splittin wood.

Jest serious as could be he kept A-goin roun an roun.
On all the ladies' trains he stepped When he warn't fallin down. He stood it jest as long as he Could stand it; then he throwed His hat down till they laughed to see, Then jerked his coat an blowed.

He give his galluses a hitch
An squared himself, an then
As quick as that they seen him pitch
Right 'mongst the gals an men.
'Twas dancin now without a doubt.
For they they seen him peol Fer then they seen him peel His weakit off an jump about In a Virginny reel. -Atlanta Constitution.

A MUTUAL FRIEND.

and Walker into a fellowship like that of Damon and Pythias, set them so far apart that oceans roll between them and deserts parch and bake. This is, of course, a figure of speech, for Ferguson and Walker both live in Chicago, where there are no oceans or deserts.

But the feeling of loathing which has risen up to separate these two men whom Howard had hoped to make firm friends accomplishes the purpose of desert and ocean and mountain chain too. And yet the two men have met but once, and then only to say "How d'ye do?"

Howard lives in Pocatello, Ida. To Pocatello a year ago went Ferguson, journeying on some affair connected with the railroad company which pays him well for knowing intricate and hidden things about the transportation business. Ferguson was in Pocatello for questions, and the chances are that Fer two weeks. It was a gloomy sort of exile, and but for the presence of Howard, whom he met on the first day of his vis- about my own new baby—which it, he would have suffered horrible haven't got. Heavens, I wish this busi pangs and gripings of lonesomeness, but ness had never started! I wish I'd never Howard, bright, entertaining and all promised to call on Ferguson. I wis informed, was as a wellspring of hap. Ferguson would get run over by a cabl piness and made the railroad man's stay car or come to some definite and perma in the sunburned regions of Idaho a nent end. I'm getting to hate the ver pleasant vacation, and when Ferguson name of him. I'll bet he's a ches easy conscience, for he, too, thought it than white for me to call on that frien would be pleasant to meet one whom of his at first, but I've got so blamed Howard recommended for his worth.

Then he returned to Chicago. The letter of introduction nestled in his pocket for a month, quite forgotten. At the expiration of that time Ferguson received a note from Howard, who wanted to know something about a business matter which they had discussed in Pocatello. As a postscript Howard added the question:

"You have seen Walker, of course?

Great fellow, isn't he?" "Walker, Walker-let me see," Ferguson mused. "Who in thunder is Walker? Oh, yes. That fellow I have the letter of introduction to. Well, I really must call on him."

The same mail which bore the missive to Ferguson also carried one to Walker. Howard, among other things, wrote these words: "You remember Ferguson, whom I asked you to call upon? What do you think of him? He's the right sort, isn't he?'

"By George," Walker cried on read-ing Howard's letter, "he did ask me to drop in on somebody named Ferguson, to whom he had given a letter for presentation to me. And I've clean forgotten it. Wonder where the man's to be found?" He examined the directory's list of Fergusons, and then, with some show of disappointment, said to himself: "Pshaw! His office is down in the Grand Central station, three miles away. Well, next time I'm over that way I'll stop." Then he called for his ing Howard that he had enjoyed his visit with Ferguson immensely.

Two weeks afterward Ferguson received further documents from Pocatel.

"The matter you were examining into." Howard wrote, "turns out to be a Spain. Both in the far east and the far pretty good thing, and I'd advise you to west the exact size and number of packhang on to it. I'll keep you posted on ages shipped, the number of voyages per developments. I'll not let them fool you. By the way, what do you think of Walker? You haven't told me."

"Thunder and lightning!" Ferguson uttered, "I ought to have called on there in Pocatello and I haven't gratitude enough to go and meet the man he asked me to." He would have rushed out forthwith to commune with Walker, only he saw that the directory located the man away off on the North Side.

"I'll take that letter around to him nor plant a field without license.

next week," said Ferguson. He did not, however. He t forgot all about Walker until a fortnight passed and information came from Pocatello that "the property is up 20 per cent in value. Give my respects to Walker the next time you see him."

"Next time I see him," Ferguson repeated. "Let's see. Did I say I had already met him? I guess I must have told Howard something like that. Well, I'll have to lie it out on that line if it takes all summer." So he answered Howard's letter by saying that he and Walker had together seen a play the night before and had had a most enor- wolves let loose among a fold of sheep. mously good time. He even repeated -Westminster Review.

some anecdotes of Howard's earlier life which he declared Walker had told him. "I'd like to know whether Walker is married or single," Ferguson thought. "I've got a bully story I could tell about him if I only knew. Doggone him! I wish I didn't have that letter of introduction to him. He's getting to be a kind of nuisance." About the same time Walker, writ ing to Howard, was saying how much he was indebted to the western man for the pleasure he had drawn from his companionship with Ferguson.

"Only I wish to heaven Harry hadn't been so fervent in his desire to have me meet the fellow," he observed to himself. "I suppose that, as he says, this man Ferguson is all right, but I haven't sake a long time ago, but I keep forgetting it, and now I've involved myself in a foolish mesh of lies about my ex- THE RAILROAD TIME-TABLES. periences with Ferguson, whom I have not met, and whom, to tell the truth, I'm getting so I don't want to meet."

Out in Pocatello Harry Howard was delighted with the tidings he received from Chicago. "It's a great satisfaction," he told himself, "to bring two good men together this way. It's really a noteworthy thing to be the author of Howard, desiring to bring Ferguson a firm friendship between two first class people. Only I hardly think I understand this last letter of Ferguson's. I thought Walker had only two children, and here Ferguson writes me about his little girl. She must have been born in the last year. There were certainly only two boys when I passed through Chicago last summer. I'll send Ben my congratulations."

When Walker received the sheet conveying honest Harry Howard's good wishes for the best and brightest future for little Miss Walker, he ran his fingers through his hair and looked dazed. "When did I say anything about a new baby?" he wondered. "I must have written him some lie about that fellow Ferguson's child. I think I have described the man's wife and children and father-in-law and the mortgage of his house in my communications wit Howard. Harry's always asking nev guson has no family, and Howard think it was a slip of the pen and that I wrot was ready to leave Howard said to him: skate anyhow who has imposed upo "Now, old man, I want you to be Howard's good nature. Why should to meet him and say: 'How are you? know a friend of yours.' I shan't d

Ferguson had already come to a sim lar conclusion. "Howard's a first cla fellow, and he made things might pleasant for me in Pocatello," he re Ferguson thanked Howard with an soned, "and it would have been no mor tired of the very mention of the name that it fills me with loathing. I believe that if I were to meet that pirate of a Walker I'd want to throw bricks at him. I thought the first lie I told about him would let me out, but the falsehoods have multiplied upon themselves until I don't remember half the facts I have reported concerning that outlaw whom I have never seen.

Two weeks ago Ferguson and Walker met. Ferguson, entering the library of his club, was accosted by a fellow member, who introduced his visiting friend, Walker. The two glared at each other, and Ferguson hurried into the billiard

"I have changed my mind about presenting an application for membership," said Walker to the man who was escorting him. The next day Ferguson met the member who had introduced Walker and said, "I'm sorry, old man, but if it is your intention to offer that fellow's name for membership I'll certainly do my best to get him black-

YOU ARE A YOUNG MAN

And want to please her, we can suggest a great many things that it would be perfectly proper for you to offer your young lady friend. A Fur. Collarette, for instance, in which the range of prices fit any purse, for in that new line just in are Collarettes from $2 50 to $25. One or more pairs of Kid Gloves we are sure will please, and if the size you select is not correct an exchange can be made later; 89c, $1, $1.25 are the popular prices. What does the dressy young lady think more of than a nobby Umbrella, and where could you expect to do as well in buying one as here? Easy-to-pay prices are from $1 35 to $5, and 300 styles to choose from. Purses, Chatlains, Fine Hosiery, Dainty Handkerchiefs, Metal Belts, Silk Waists.

THE MAN OF THE HOUSE

He hardly knows what to buy; he is willing and all he needs is a suggestion. Why not put into his head that there are lots of things in a dry goods store that please the women folks. He could buy a pattern of table linen, a dozen napkins, a few towels, and that special table value at 50 and 75c for beautiful damask towels, tied fringe and openwork borders, offers the towel chance; or if he would buy a pair of Blankets, he would probably enjoy them himself before winter was over; or something in the Dress Goods line—say a pattern of black goods which never is amiss; or something in the Underwear stock, Skirt stock, Curtain stock.

Fur Robes

A purchase of 100 Angora Robes, some suitable for baby carriage robes others heavier and larger for floor use; divided into lots at 89c, $1, $1.20—actual values up to $4.

Sample Aprons

A splendid line of White Aprons, including a new sample line, with the usual low prices that are in keeping.

Holiday values in two lines, at 50 and 75c. "The Garland," silk embroidered front, collar and cuffs.

Mentioned last, but first thought of in connection with Christmas. You can make no mistake in buying your Hannkerchiefs here; our iines are great at 3c, 5c, 10c, 15c, 19c, 25c and up to$1.

MAY FORM AN ASSOCIATION Children of Black Hawk War Veteran

Planning A Reunion. A rennion to form an association cf the sons and daughters of the Black Hawk war veterans may be held next June. There are only three or four surviving heroes of the conflict. The only known survivors are Dr. Tom Monroe of Monroe, H. S. Townsend. of Warren, Ill, and Jacob Berbridge of Lens. Ill.

An effort is being made to establish a Black Hawk park near the Kent monument, and if the project is a success the dedication of it and the organ ization of the sons and daughters will be combined.

The museum idea has been favorably considered. In it will be gathered J. D. WALTERS an old settler of Berthe relice which are attainable by lin, died Saturday. the Black Hawk war and pioneer days, with records of priceless worth.
